When you make an app that directly links a user's DEBIT card to your account (no other options or protections provided), it's best to make sure it's operational, but instead we have it. About a week ago, I received a message from Zelle at 3:45 in the morning for an automatic transfer (no one was sending me money so early in the morning). I went to change the notification settings, only to find that I needed my password to turn off the text messages. That's when I realized I'd forgotten my password. At the time I couldn't find any place in your app to reset it, and because I have an external bank, I don't have access to a web account. I tried forgot password? on the Zelle portal, but I never received an email. That didn't take me out of my account. I couldn't make any changes to the account. Moving forward to today -- the app registered me (possibly due to an update?), and while it now gives me a forgotten password option, after resetting it, I get the error message unable to verify the password. I even wrote to make sure I reinserted correctly, but no luck. And that's where I'm stuck - completely locked out of my account. I'm more than frustrated. I use this to get family money transfers, and I've never had a single problem with clearxchange. Now, with this forced exchange for Zelle, I can't even do the simplest task. Either fix the app or give us a website, because now this is absolutely useless. ARNR6LRY Did you know that millions of people can use zelle directly with your financial institution's banking application? If your bank or credit union offers Zelle, you'll need to use zelle within your banking app to send and receive money. Money, the convenience of using zelle within your banking app instead of a separate app. You'll have access to Zelle next to your financial institution's mobile banking resources, and you can choose the account you want to use to send and receive money more easily. What you need to do Access Zelle in your banking app to get started. If you are asked to rewrite with zelle through your bank or credit union, simply follow the easy steps to register your US email or mobile number. You can also visit enroll.zellepay.com and search for your bank or credit union. Once you are enrolled with Zelle through your financial institution, you can start using Zelle directly within your banking app! Related questions Why can't I use the Zelle app anymore? The Zelle app will soon be available only to users whose banks and credit unions do not offer Zelle directly to their customers. As your financial institution offers zelle, you can use it directly through your banking app (and online banking, if available) to send and receive money. What should I do now to continue using Zelle? Start using zelle in your banking app! Go to Zelle in your banking app to get started. Once you are enrolled with Zelle through your bank or credit union, you should be able to see your Zelle transaction history in your banking app. In the meantime, you'll be able to see your zelle payment and transaction history by checking your bank statements. Pro-tip: Many banks and credit unions offer Zelle under the Transfers section in their banking app. So try searching for a section in your banking app labeled Transfers, or ask your financial institution if you need help finding Zelle in your banking app. What happens if I don't do anything? Soon, you won't be able to use the Zelle app anymore. To continue using zelle, you'll need to start using Zelle through your banking app. If you are asked to rewrite with zelle through your financial institution, simply follow the steps within your banking app to register your US email or mobile number.
